

DOCTOR GOULD IS STRICKEN DEAD AS HE WALKS ON STREET

He Leaves Friends Who Were Caring for Him This Morning to Come Down Town and Dies Before Aid Arrives

HE WAS EDITOR OF EARLY DAYS HERE

Dr. George T. Gould, well known newspaper man, died suddenly today of a complication of heart trouble. He had been ill for some time and since last Tuesday had been in St. Joseph's hospital. Dr. Gould leaves a wife and six children. He was well known in his chosen field and was a pioneer editor of New Mexico. For thirteen years, beginning at 1885, he edited the Las Vegas Daily Optic, except for a period of two years when he edited the Albuquerque Journal-Democrat, now the Morning Journal. After this, he went to El Paso, where he edited and at one time owned, the El Paso News. He was engaged in editorial work on the News and elsewhere in El Paso for five years. He then came back to Albuquerque and edited the Evening Citizen for several years, finally retiring to his ranch south of the city.

The call of the pen was too strong, however, and from time to time he came to Albuquerque to edit various papers, among them the New Mexico State Democrat, and its predecessor, the New Mexico Democrat.

He had been under treatment for his ailment for a number of months, but was too active, according to his physicians. He broke himself down by doing too much work.

Dr. Gould was a native of Kentucky and came to New Mexico about 1885. He was among the first editors of the Las Vegas Optic, the Morning Journal, which was then the Democrat, and the Evening Citizen.

Before his wife, he leaves two sons in the southwest, one of them circulation manager of the El Paso Herald, and the other a railway mail clerk, running out of here, and two sons and two daughters in Kentucky, children of his first wife.

Dr. Gould was a doctor of divinity, and at one time had been at the head of a Baptist seminary in his native state.

As a writer, Dr. Gould was brilliant and forceful. His trenchant style has been used as a model by many a type, and those with whom he came in contact found him always a courteous man.

Dr. Gould left those who were caring for him this morning. He had been undergoing treatment for heart trouble but came down town. He was missed and his physician was anxious for his safety, as of late he has been quite feeble. A search, which was unsuccessful, was begun.

A friend found Dr. Gould in front of a store on West Silver avenue gasping for breath and holding in a telephone key-wire for support. He brought him into a store and observing his condition, notified two physicians at once. One physician arrived a few minutes before death claimed the aged editor, but saw at once that the case was hopeless. An ambulance was called, but arrived too late to take the dying man back to a hospital.

A pathetic incident of the death was the fact that Dr. Gould carried in his hand a borrowed book at the time supposedly trying to return it to the owner. The book was R. R. Crockett's "The White Plume."

Dr. Gould had many friends, and the respect and admiration accorded him, particularly by his fellow craftsmen, was great.

He was a past eminent commander of the Knights Templars of Las Vegas, a past exalted ruler of the Elks. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

DR. HYDE FACES JURY ALONE

All Spectators and Witnesses Are Sent from Court Room and Chair Occupied by His Wife Is Left Vacant.

(By Evening Herald A. P. Leased Wire)

Kansas City, Nov. 20.—By a rule sought by the state attorneys but the defendant in the Dr. B. Clark Hyde murder case were excused from the court room today. Thus for the first time since Dr. Hyde was brought to trial he faced his accusers alone.

The seat beside him usually occupied by his wife was vacant. Immediately after the witnesses departed Senator James A. Reed began his opening statement for the prosecution. Every seat in the court room was filled an hour before the court opened. When Senator Reed began his speech all of the aisles and the space inside the rail was filled by spectators. Attorneys for the prosecution today denied a rumor that testimony regarding cyanide would not be used in the trial.

BRIEF BLAZE CALLS OUT DEPARTMENTS

A blaze in the shoe shop of Frank Maldonado at Central avenue and Broadway called out both departments at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The fire was soon extinguished, but had already done a good deal of damage, for which Maldonado will be unable to recover any insurance as he was not carrying any fire protection of that sort. A good deal of leather and shoe material was destroyed, and Maldonado is yet unable to make any estimate of the loss.

The owner of the shop was sitting in the front room repairing shoes when a passerby came in and told him the back room, hardly 10 feet away, was ablaze.

INSLEY DOES NOT WANT HIS BABY IN A HOME

Convicted Slayer of John Higgins Wants His Brother to Have Custody of Child.

Saturday afternoon, with tears in his eyes, Thomas Insley called his baby the "one spot of sunshine in his whole life," and protested vigorously against his wife and her family having sent the child to a home in Colorado.

"From newspaper articles it seems," said the prisoner, "the baby had already been sent to the Colorado home when I was tried. That baby was the one bright spot in my life, the one ray of sunshine. It was because of that baby that I am here now, and I do not want it to go to a home. I have written my brother asking him to take care of the child and help me get it out of the home, and I have written a man in Denver, too. I cannot bear to think of my little child in a home. I want you to state to the people of Albuquerque that I did not consent to the sending of the child to the home, for I feel that this puts me in a bad light. I want my brother to take the child and not have it left to others to care for."

Famous Salvation Army Worker to Tell of What Army Work Is Doing for the "Submerged Tenth."

What the Salvation Army is doing for the submerged tenth, the people of the lower strata of civilization, in the office and especially in the slums, will be the subject of an address to be delivered by Colonel Henry S. Lee, a noted Salvation Army worker to-night. Major Frank White, aide-de-camp to the colonel, accompanies him here.

Colonel Lee has had great success in turning the vicious and morally depraved into law-abiding citizens, and useful members of society, and is especially fitted to speak on that work.

After the address, a sergeant will be commissioned, and several soldiers, converts of the local corps, will be sworn into the army. The meeting will be held in the hall at 8 o'clock, but will be preceded by an open air gathering at 7:30 o'clock. The address will be delivered in the Salvation Army hall, on West Silver avenue near Second street.
